Leading with Purpose: Andrus President and CEO Receives Dual Honors for Transformational Leadership

Corine E. Lurry-Mabin, PhD Candidate, named a Crain's Notable Leader in Philanthropy and 914INC. CEO and Business Leader of the Year

Westchester County, NY — Andrus is proud to announce that its President and CEO, Corine E. Lurry-Mabin, has been honored by two leading publications for her visionary leadership in the nonprofit sector. In June 2025, Crain's New York Business named Ms. Lurry-Mabin among its Notable Leaders in Philanthropy, while 914INC. selected her as one of Westchester's CEOs and Business Leaders of the Year. Corine E. Lurry-Mabin was named President and CEO of Andrus in January 2025, bringing nearly three decades of experience, strategic insight, and mission-driven leadership to the role. Over her 28-year tenure with the organization, she has served in both direct care and executive leadership positions, consistently advancing equity, innovation, and trauma-responsive care. Her deep institutional knowledge and unwavering commitment to the well-being of vulnerable children and families have earned her recognition as a respected leader both within Andrus and across the broader human services field.

Ms. Lurry-Mabin is a longstanding champion of the Sanctuary Model, a nationally recognized framework for trauma-responsive care developed by the Sanctuary Institute, a division of Andrus. Under her leadership, she works diligently to helping systems of care build cultures of healing, inclusion, and resilience.

Her leadership is grounded in compassion, collaboration, and a bold vision for sustainable impact—qualities that continue to shape the future of Andrus and the communities it serves.

These recognitions come at a pivotal time for Andrus, a nationally recognized nonprofit based in Yonkers, NY, known for its trauma-responsive services for children and families. | "This recognition reflects a movement—one grounded in the belief that every child and every family deserves the opportunity to heal, to thrive, and to lead lives filled with possibility," said Corine E. Lurry-Mabin, President and CEO of Andrus. "At Andrus, we are not just responding to trauma; we are reimagining what care can look like when it is infused with equity, empathy, and bold, systemic change. I am honored to lead this work alongside a community so deeply committed to transforming futures."

A Dual Honor Reflecting a Bold Vision for Change

Crain's Notable Leaders in Philanthropy honors individuals whose career achievements, community engagement, and commitment to service have made a lasting social impact.

Awardees are selected from a competitive pool of nominees across New York State. Nominees are evaluated by a panel of editors and industry experts based on their leadership record, measurable contributions, and dedication to equity and access in philanthropic work. Read more: Crain's Notable Leaders in Philanthropy, https://www.crainsnewyork.com/
