FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Andrus President and CEO Corine E. Lurry-Mabin Named 2026 Business Council of Westchester Hall of Fame Honoree
Honored in the Minority Business Success category for mission-driven leadership and community impact

Yonkers, NY — Corine E. Lurry-Mabin, President and Chief Executive Officer of Julia Dyckman Andrus Memorial, Inc. (Andrus), has been named a 2026 Hall of Fame Award recipient by The Business Council of Westchester (BCW). Lurry-Mabin will be honored in the Minority Business Success category, recognizing her exceptional leadership, impact, and contributions to Westchester County's business and nonprofit landscape.

The Business Council of Westchester Hall of Fame Awards are among the region's most prestigious honors, celebrating outstanding leaders and organizations whose vision, innovation, and commitment have strengthened Westchester's economy and communities. Each year, BCW inducts a select group of individuals and companies whose work exemplifies excellence across multiple sectors, including corporate citizenship, entrepreneurial achievement, small business success, and family-owned enterprise.

Lurry-Mabin's recognition in the Minority Business Success category honors her leadership of Andrus as a mission-driven, financially sustainable organization that delivers high-impact services while serving as a major employer and community partner in Westchester County. Under her guidance, Andrus has expanded its system of care—supporting children, families, and communities through education, behavioral health services, residential treatment, and trauma-responsive programs—while maintaining strong organizational growth, accountability, and long-term strategic vision.

"This recognition honors the people and the purpose behind Andrus," said Lurry-Mabin. "Every day our staff work to create safety, stability, and opportunity for children and families who have experienced trauma. I am grateful to BCW for this honor and for recognizing the nonprofit sector as essential to Westchester's strength."

"Corine leads with both compassion and operational discipline," said Melinda George, the Chair of the Andrus Board of Directors, and Andrus Family member. "She has strengthened organizational stability while keeping the focus where it belongs, on measurable outcomes for children and families and the staff who support them."

BCW typically announces its Hall of Fame honorees early in the year, with a formal Hall of Fame Gala held each April, bringing together business, civic, and nonprofit leaders from across Westchester County to celebrate the region's collective impact. The 2026 class will include six distinguished leaders and organizations selected for their lasting contributions to Westchester's business community.

More information about the 2026 Hall of Fame Awards and the April gala celebration will be announced by the Business Council of Westchester in the coming months.
